Coaching & Training Testimonials. When I retired in January 2010, I said, in no uncertain terms, that I was not going to do any coaching or training; however, because salespeople call me from all over the world seeking help, advice, I've been doing a ton of coaching/training—pro bono. It's gotten to the point that I can't get everything done in a day that needs to be done. Lots of things can hold you back from executing a successful strategy or moving to the next stage in life — but you don't have to let fear be one of them. Allow these five habits of strategic ...It's time. Buying your very first home is one of life's biggest thrills, but it comes with a few chills, too. Never fear: We've got first time home buyer tips that answer all the questions you were afraid to ask — plus those you never thought to. Beyond the annual review, performance management should include ongoing feedback, goal-setting, coaching, strengths-based development, and recognition and rewards – and managers must be held accountable for these outcomes.
