Établissement Huret was founded by André Huret in Nanterre in Paris in 1920. Its first product was wing nuts for wheel axles - and Huret wing nuts were still much in evidence in oily brown cardboard boxes in the back of grubby bicycle shops well into the 1970s.Æoleus Butterfly, 1990s 370 pages, issues #1 to #20 of the predecessor to On The Wheel magazine and the Bikelore series, a 'zine comprised of original and "borrowed" materials spanning a vast array of cycling history with an emphasis on vintage road racing. Motor-assist bicycles were first introduced over 120 years ago, back in the late 1890's. By this time in history bicycles were widely accepted and utilized for transportation, leisure and sport, but with the advent of the internal combustion engine (first developed in 1794) inventors made headway with adapting an engine to a bicycle frame.
